Apply for Office of Victims of Crime Training and Technical Assistance Center's (OVC TTAC) National Victim Assistance Academy, "Effective Management Series: Financial Management." This training is designed for those responsible for their organization's financial management. It will be delivered online, over the course of 5 weeks, beginning on May 29, 2018. Each week, except for the introductory week, will include a facilitated webinar. The Financial Management training is part of the NVAA Effective Management Series and, like all of OVC TTAC trainings, there is no cost to participate. Those who complete all components of this training will receive .9 CEUs. Overview: To serve crime victims more effectively, victim service organizations must use fundamental financial management practices to stay solvent and operate properly. In this training, participants will learn key bookkeeping and accounting principles, how to prepare financial documents, how to prevent fraud, and the differences in available financial management tools.

Register for OVC TTAC's Online Expert Q&A: Interjurisdictional Enforcement of Protection Orders. May 23, 2018 | 2:00 PM EDT. Overview: Assisting survivors of domestic violence can often involve multiple legal jurisdictions. In many cases, these survivors may also have protection orders that need to be enforced. The Full Faith and Credit (FFC) provision (18 U.S. Code § 2265) of VAWA requires that protection orders issued in one jurisdiction must be recognized and enforced in other jurisdictions, but enforcement across state, tribal, or territorial jurisdictions can sound daunting to survivors as well as service providers. The effective enforcement of protection orders across jurisdictional lines is essential to the safety of victims. This session will discuss the legal concept of FFC; what interjurisdictional enforcement may look like for survivors and abusers; and help advocates navigate some of the challenges associated with interjurisdictional enforcement of protection orders under FFC.

Free Gun Locks for Tribal Law Enforcement and Health Organizations. The U.S. Department of Justice – Bureau of Justice Assistance (BJA), in cooperation with the National Shooting Sports Foundation's Project ChildSafe, has announced a new program that makes free gun locks and firearms safety information, including information on suicide prevention, available to tribal law enforcement and health organizations, for distribution in their communities. Project ChildSafe is the firearms industry's safety program that provides education on the importance of storing firearms responsibly when not in use. The cornerstone of the program is the Project ChildSafe firearm safety kit, which includes a cable-style gun lock and a brochure that discusses safe handling and storage. Since its launch, Project ChildSafe has distributed more than 37 million of these free safety kits through partnerships with 15,000 law enforcement agencies in all 50 states and five U.S. territories. The locks themselves meet ASTM and California DOJ standards, and are shipped in boxes of 100 along with brochures and other information. Everything is provided at no cost; the locks and other resources are made available through a grant from BJA, while supplies last. To order the locks, simply go to this link and complete the form. Additional educational resources are also available on the Project ChildSafe website. For more information visit, projectchildsafe.org.

U.S. Department of Labor Announces $62 Million in Grants to Provide Employment Assistance and Workforce Development Services to Native Americans. Through these grants, the Department's Indian and Native American Employment and Training program seeks to assist American Indians, Alaska Natives, and Native Hawaiians in obtaining employment and increasing wages through job placement, education, and occupational skills development. To help Native Americans become more competitive in the workforce, the grants will help individuals develop academic, occupational, literacy, and entrepreneurial skills necessary for successful employment – consistent with the values and goals of Native American communities. The deadline to apply is May 18, 2018.

The National Crime Victim Law Institute (NCVLI) wants to hear from you! Securing victims' rights post-conviction requires a comprehensive, victim-inclusive approach. This is true because despite victims' significant rights and interests post-conviction, victims continue to have a range of unmet needs. NCVLI is working to help fill this gap through its work with its Post-Conviction Victims' Rights Knowledge, Access and Enforcement Project, which is funded under Grant No. 2017-VF-GX-K026, awarded by the Office for Victims of Crime, Office of Justice Programs, U.S. Department of Justice. Please complete the short questionnaire and let NCVLI know what resource-topics would most enhance your work with victims.

VAWA 2013's Special Domestic Violence Criminal Jurisdiction – Five-Year Report. The National Congress of American Indians released a new report summarizing the first five years of tribal government expanded criminal jurisdiction over non-Indians under the tribal provisions of the 2013 reauthorization of the Violence Against Women Act (VAWA 2013). VAWA 2013 created a framework for tribal courts to prosecute non-Indians who commit domestic or dating violence against Indian victims on tribal lands—something that has not happened in 35 years, since Oliphant v. Suquamish Tribe. NCAI worked closely with the 18 tribal nations who exercised this expanded jurisdiction. These tribes report 143 arrests and 74 convictions of 128 different non-Indian abusers. VAWA 2013 allowed tribes to finally prosecute these long-time abusers who previously had evaded justice and provide increased safety and justice for victims who previously had little of either. The report documents how committed each tribe has been to successfully implementing VAWA and ensuring effective administration of justice in their communities. Not only do non-Indian offenders receive a fair day in court, but many tribes include broader resources aligned with cultural values for community wellness to ensure that these defendants receive help and support. The report highlights specific examples and makes a series of findings regarding these early successes as well as the challenges for implementing tribes.

“Tribal Domestic Violence Courts/Dockets: Key principles, custom, tradition and multidisciplinary practices” Webinar Recording. This webinar by the Tribal Law and Policy Institute is the second in a series on Tribal Domestic Violence Courts/Dockets and focuses on the history of domestic violence courts/dockets and will underscore the critical importance of the key principles guiding a domestic violence court and/or docket. This webinar discusses the role tribal custom and tradition can play in developing key principles and in developing the court structure. The holistic approach to victim safety and batterer accountability will be explored through a multi-disciplinary lens, which is a hallmark of the domestic violence court model. Tribal domestic violence courts are specialized courts with targeted caseloads consisting of domestic violence cases. Tribal domestic violence courts are comprised of personnel who are well trained in the dynamics of domestic violence and committed to working collaboratively among various victim service providers/systems to meet the needs of the family. Additionally, these courts focus on victim safety and batterer accountability by closely monitoring batterer compliance with court orders. National Indigenous Elder Justice Initiative. Most cases of elder abuse are undetected, under reported, and unresolved resulting in injury, financial decimation, and even death. The National Indigenous Elder Justice Initiative (NIEJI) was created to address the lack of culturally appropriate information and community education materials on elder abuse, neglect, and exploitation in Indian Country. Learn more about Elder Abuse Warning signs, the Native Elder Protection Team Toolkit, Online Interactive Education, Elder Abuse Codes, State/Tribal Hotlines, and more!

Mental Health Awareness Month Resources (May)...

Mental Health America: Native American Communities and Mental Health. Mental Health America works nationally and locally to raise awareness about mental health and ensures that those at-risk for mental illnesses and related disorders receive proper, timely and effective treatment. MHA incorporates culturally competent strategies to ensure that it is effectively addressing the treatment and psychosocial needs of consumers and families with diverse values, beliefs, sexual orientations, and backgrounds that vary by race, ethnicity and/or language.

The Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA) recently released a grant funding opportunity announcement (FOA) entitled, "Tribal Behavioral Health Grant Program." The purpose of this program is to prevent and reduce suicidal behavior and substance use, reduce the impact of trauma, and promote mental health among American Indian/Alaska Native (AI/AN) youth through the age of 24 years. Native Connections is intended to reduce the impact of mental and substance use disorders, foster culturally responsive models that reduce and respond to the impact of trauma in AI/AN communities¹, and allow AI/AN communities to facilitate collaboration among agencies to support youth as they transition into adulthood. Application Due Date: Friday, June 22, 2018.

SAMHSA's Tribal Affairs Agenda. The tribal affairs agenda includes opportunities for informed communication with tribal leaders on SAMHSA policies and programs to improve behavioral health among Native American populations. The primary focus of SAMHSA's tribal affairs agenda is youth suicide and substance use disorder prevention within American Indian and Alaska Native communities. Also, SAMHSA strives to engage federal agencies, national and regional American Indian and Alaska Native organizations, states, and behavioral health providers to collaborate on mitigating the social and economic factors that impede positive behavioral health outcomes.

American Indian and Alaska Native Health. American Indian and Alaska Native Health is a central source for information about the health and well-being of Native Americans and Alaska Natives. It is freely available and offers access to evaluated and authoritative resources for: individuals, health educators, and healthcare professionals.

MentalHealth.gov: MentalHealth.gov provides one-stop access to U.S. government mental health and mental health problems information. MentalHealth.gov aims to educate and guide: The general public, Health and emergency preparedness professionals, Policy makers, Government and business leaders, School systems, and Local communities. Content for this website is provided by: Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, MedlinePlus and National Institutes of Health, National Institute of Mental Health (NIMH), Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA) and Youth.gov.

"Through Our Eyes: Children, Violence, and Trauma" video series from the Office for Victims of Crime (OVC). Trauma left unaddressed can have serious consequences for children and youth as they grow up. "Through Our Eyes" encourages everyone to act to protect children from crime and abuse and help them heal from trauma.

Suicide Prevention Resource Center. The Suicide Prevention Resource Center (SPRC) is the nation's only federally supported resource center devoted to advancing the National Strategy for Suicide Prevention. SPRC is funded by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services' Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA) under grant no. 1U79SM062297
